Market Watchers

Dick Brown, Editor

Dick Brown, a graduate of the University of British Columbia, has worked in the wood products industry for more than three decades. His experience includes being a homebuilder, a partner in a large wholesale firm, vice president of a Vancouver-based consulting firm and president of the Canadian division of a large Japanese importer. He presently runs his own business supplying value-added products to domestic and overseas markets. As editor of The Barometer, he brings with him practical knowledge of the world's markets for forest products.

George Cruickshank, Associate Editor

George Cruickshank graduated from the University of British Columbia with a bachelor of science in forestry (B.Sc.F) degree. He has more than five decades' experience in lumber wholesaling and manufacturing, primarily in the North American market. George's background and expertise make him well-suited to report price information and gauge market direction for The Barometer.
